Part 1 — Proposal

- The app I would be cloning for my homework is Mealime. This app is about to shut down, so having a similar app which does a similar can help people like me.
- The app will help save time and promote eating a healthy and well-balanced diet. I decided to clone this app because as a college student living alone, I have to cook all my meals, which takes a lot of time. Besides that, deciding what to eat take a lot of time too. Also, while cooking sometimes, I realize that I don't have all the ingredients which forces me to change the recipe or spend extra time finding a substitute.
- I am going to list a bunch of recipes from different cuisines, then you can choose multiple recipes, and my app will give all the ingredients required as well as the cooking instructions. There will also be an AI feature which can generate new recipes and help track calories and macros. For now, I will remove the feature to buy those ingredients from the app which is connected to different retail stores like Safeway, Walmart, Costco etc. I will also remove any premium fee which was charged at mealime for some specific recipes.
